The Nature of Change and The Next Generation

9:00 to 10:00 am - Registration and Coffee
10:00 to 12 noon - Program
12 noon - Optional box lunch

How might the work of museum leaders connect to the next generation? What can we do to ensure our work is relevant to a new generation? Weaving together a few seemingly unconnected stories and reflecting on his own journey, Ron Chew will lend insight to the important notion of leaving a legacy for museum leaders of tomorrow.

Ron Chew is principal of Chew Communications and served as Wing Luke Asian Museum Executive Director from 1991-2007. Known by many as an innovator in working with the local community to act as curators of exhibitions, Ron has re-defined museum education by melding cultural identity, civic participation, and museum programs as an agent for social justice. Through his leadership, he was instrumental in turning around a struggling Wing Luke Asian Museum and setting its course to become a culturally thriving and financially viable institution. Ron is the recipient of the Ford Foundation "Leadership for a Changing World" award and an honoree of the Association of American Museum's Centennial Honor Roll that has recognized the top 100 people who have supported the profession and helped make America's museums places of discovery, inspiration, joy, and life long learning.
